Economic Revival Plan for Goan Villages

Mr. Yash Bhushan Prabhugaonkar
Assistant Professor (visiting)
S.S. Dempo College of Commerce and Economics
B.E.,MBA,MTTM
Yash29792@gmail.com

Abstract

The Directorate of Higher Education (DHE) and Goa Institute of Public Administration and Rural Development (GIPARD), have been entrusted with the responsibility of undertaking a study of the village panchayats in order to draw up a detailed 'Economic Revival Plan', to enhance the economic growth and sourcing out the livelihood opportunities in the State of Goa. To report analysis the potential for a revival of sectors related to agriculture, self-help groups, youth, animal husbandry, horticulture, fishing, retail traders and possibilities of institutional strengthening at the village level, to analyse the scope of enhancing revenue for the Panchayat. This study has adopted Qual-Quan approach to collect data from institutions and people from village panchayat on different aspects. The data was collected in-between April 2020 and May2020. Primary qualitative data is collected from focus group discussions, and quantitative data is collected by distributing hard copies of questionnaires and online google survey. The secondary data is collected from reports, studies, Gram Panchayat Development Plans and Bio-diversity study report. This report also suggests recommendations to revive the economy in the village by focusing on agriculture and allied activities, self-help groups and youths from the village.

Introduction

'The five-year plan made for the period 2012-2017 had five outcomes for sustainable development in rural areas. These outcomes were, improve conservation of natural resources, promote efficient use of resources, curtail, and control any negative environmental impacts, improve climate resilience in the communities and educate and improve methods of climate change mitigation. The plan examined every rural development scheme currently in implementation and examined its associated with each sustainable development goal. It emphasised the importance of communication between the governmental organisations and the people as this proved to be one of the major problems standing in between the people and the outcomes (UNDP, 2012). The last census conducted in 2011 estimated about 37.82% of the population in Goa lives in rural areas. Of course, that number would have increased now; however, it goes to show, a large number of people would benefit from an economic revival, especially during a pandemic (CI, 2011). There have been failures in reviving the rural economy, especially in areas such as agriculture and mining. Employment opportunities are also on the decline on account of this.

Village panchayats will have to play a crucial role to revive the economy. According to Clarke “Local Self-Government is the ‘smallest unit under which the people of the locality possess a certain responsibility and discretion in the administration of local affairs and in the raising of money to meet the expenses”. ‘Self-Government’ is the government under the control and direction of inhabitant’s political unit rather than outside authority. Local Self-Government may be defined to denote the structure and operations of the smaller public bodies which are needed to supplement the actions of central and state governments. These units are called local because they are very close to the common man and their problems. They are governed by their local representatives who are elected through a fair election process. Local finance is the lifeblood of local self-government. Ursula Hicks stoutly emphasized the growing importance of local finance. She states, “Local self-government is the engine on the path of development”. This engine requires fuel to run. Ultimately the fuel, that is, local finance becomes the core of the problem of local self-government. So far as financial resources of such governments are concerned, such institutions are primarily dependent on the devolutions from the State government. However, local governments, for specific schemes, do receive financial grants directly from the Central government.

At this point in the pandemic, the agriculture sector is an essential service. A paper on reviving grassroots in India examined all the problems faced by the sector. The paper stated that the green revolution, which was earlier hailed to be a tremendous success in the 1960s, has now lost its momentum. The quality of the seeds, the funding and subsidies, the neglect in the irrigation infrastructure and catchment areas were some of the problems identified. The paper concluded that a socio-political change is imperative, one where the people are connected to the governmental organisations. The second change which is imperative is to educate the farmers on sustainable methods of agriculture and encourage community activities, thereby creating a safety net for the farmers and their families (Agoramoorthy & Hsu,2008).

Methodology

This study has adopted Qual-Quan approach to collect data from institutions and people from village panchayat on different aspects. The data was collected in-between April 2020 and May2020. Primary qualitative data is collected from focus group discussions, and quantitative data is collected by distributing hard copies of questionnaires and online google survey. The secondary data is collected from reports, studies, Gram Panchayat Development Plans and Bio-diversity study report.

This research was conducted through two steps. Firstly, structured questionnaires were given to village panchayat secretaries and Panch members to provide data about the people and resources from each ward of the village. Secondly, focus group discussions were held with people from different sector.

Problems faced by revenue generating sectors in the village

Saline Water issue

- Farms are affected by saltwater entering the fields as bundhs are in poor shape and sluice gates are not appropriately maintained. Many farmers have given up farming as infiltrating saltwater has made soil uncultivable and has led to the growth of mangroves.
- The solid rocks that used to help the check dam function are now getting eroded, as the fishermen try to control the water flow in a manner that allows fish particularly prawns, to breed but at the cost of agricultural land losing its fertility. The check dam that was built during the Portuguese era was meant to function all by itself during high and low tides. However, to carry out fishing activities, the flow of water is now manually controlled where the gates are left open. Due to this, the water overflows and enters the farms and makes it unfit to cultivate.

Labour Issues

- Farming was formerly carried out by the whole family, so there was no need for any labour. However, due to changing times, and the next gen looking out for jobs in urban areas, there is a pressing need for hiring workforce.
- Most of the operators and technicians of the harvester machines hail from neighbouring state of Karnataka. Due to a lack of skilled labour, they are hired and brought to Goa only during the time of harvesting. Wages for the workers is another issue which the farmers find hard to tackle. They are difficult to bear with the number of products and profits that the farmers could make.

Lack of awareness about Government supported schemes.

- Government procedures are lengthy, time-consuming and tricky to understand, due to which most of the farmers find it difficult to avail the schemes.
- Many of the farmers are not aware of the facilities as well as benefits made available by the government schemes. For example, Kissan Credit Card Scheme (KCC), National Agricultural Insurance Scheme (NAIS).

Lack of Government Support

- The benefits of Government schemes are not made available to farmers for a claim. Some farmers are still unable to avail the benefits of Krishi Card. As the application process is tedious, and most of the farmers are elderly and unaware of the procedure.
- The Government is also not providing support to mechanise farming activities. There is also a delay in the supply of seeds and equipment by Government Departments. This creates the need to purchase low-quality seeds from other sources. Farmers are also not helped in terms of fertilisers and manure. However, some facilities like tractors are made available to some selected farmers. This selective ism discourages farmers not getting these facilities.
- Seeds are not provided on time by the Government, so the farmers purchase seeds from other sources. The seeds purchased by the farmers are not of good quality.
- Despite repeated appeals and complaints to authorities, the Director of Agriculture fails to address and resolve the issues brought to them by the farmers. Farmers are forced to take drastic steps and resort to selling their land out of panic due to the encroachment, tenancy issues and land acquisition by Government for developmental projects.
- Farmers Club/ Committee has members who never practice farming but avail the benefits. Thus, the actual farmers never get anything.

Stray Cattle and wild animals destroying crops

- Stray cattle are a constant problem, and to add to it, stray dogs and other wild animals also destroy the cultivated farms.
- Increasing nuisance by wild animals, consisting of mostly wild boars poses a noteworthy problem. Wild boars cause a significant amount of crop damage. Besides wild boars, peacocks and variety of native & migratory birds also attack their paddy farms.
- Farmers have tried placing animal traps to check wild boar incursions and other traps to scare away the birds, however, these traps haven't been effective.

Other Issues

- Village farming has also suffered due to the change in lifestyle of people and the easy access to rice sourced from other states. The availability of rice grains at prices subsidised by the Government also adds to the farmer's difficulty in earning a decent profit.
- There has been a lack of no agricultural activity for the past couple of years. Due to which, the field is overrun by mangrove vegetation. There is also an increase in nuisance activities in the fields that can be concluded from the presence of broken glass and alcohol bottles in the fields. Illegal encroachment of the fields is another significant issue.
- Farmers have also expressed concern over the greater fragmentation of landholdings. The greater the fragmentation of land, the more uneconomical it becomes to cultivate it. Farmers attributed the reason for land fragmentation to the division of property to facilitate inheritance through generations. Each patch of the field belonged to different farmers, and it was visibly divided and easily recognisable. But now all the divisions are no longer clear, and hence it is become challenging to identify ownership.
- Another issue highlighted by the farmers was that the villagers that procure cattle through government aid do not have enough space to maintain the cattle. Due to which, the animals are abandoned and therefore become a menace as stray cattle.
- The farmers prefer to use manure as a method to fertilise the soil and the crops. They believe the use of chemical fertilisers affects soil quality and reduces its fertility.
- Farmers believe that agriculture is not a sufficient means of livelihood. All the elderly farmers, when asked about getting support and help from the youngsters, replied negatively. Farmers fear that agriculture is a lost cause and will end with them, as the younger generation does not want to take it up as a livelihood.
- Farmers fear that as the years pass, the cultivable lands will lie fallow as the younger generations are not so keen in farming as an occupation. After their education, they are drawn towards white collared jobs which make pay more money at a faster rate.
- The younger generation thinks that agriculture is not a profitable business. They are not ready to work in the fields because they believe that they can make more money by doing other jobs or doing business.

ANIMAL HUSBANDRY

- Animal husbandry is practically non-existent in Goan villages. Cattle is hardly reared for meat or milk. Very few individuals were found to be practising animal husbandry by owning a few buffaloes. Dairy farming is extremely limited to select farmers. There are a few poultry farms, and some Christian families keep local varieties of pigs.

- Those managing livestock for dairy farming tend to leave their cattle in open fields for grazing, thus drawing complaints from other farmers. The main problem is that fodder plants are not cultivated in most of the Goan villages.
- In general, the farming community prefers paddy cultivation and found not to keen on animal husbandry as stray cattle, and stray dogs are considered a problem.
- The youth does not show much interest in self-employment. A survey of youth revealed that a high percentage of the young population is not interested in traditional occupations. Furthermore, there is also a lack of general awareness of government schemes.

HORTICULTURE

- Even though horticulture is more remunerative than agriculture crops, the scale of horticulture activity is extremely limited in Goan villages.
- A very limited quantity is actually produced and sold. The sale of this horticulture produce itself takes place on roadside.
- The general attitude towards commercial horticulture activity is passive.
- The hills of Goan villages had thick plantations of Cashew, Mango, Jackfruit, Kokum, Triphala along with different edible wild berries like Kanna, Chunna. Borums and Jamlas. However, now these plantations have significantly reduced in size and number as the hills have been cleared on a large scale, mainly due to road widening/bridge construction.
- Coastal villages in Goa have sandy soil which is well suited for growing coconut. However, coconut trees have been destroyed due to lack of proper care and maintenance, and there has been no replantation of coconut saplings.
- Hill cutting and road work near the village has also completely destroyed the vegetation land and cashew nut plantation in certain places. The Government acquired a lot of fertile lands for the construction of highways. The farmers received no compensation for the same.
- The farmers have not availed any schemes as most of them were unaware of the programmes available due to lack of promotion, awareness and approachability regarding the same.

FISHING

- A major issue with fishing activity is that it is undertaken in fertile agricultural land and, there is an unresolved dispute on the usage of such land for fishing purpose. The Bandh is repeatedly broken due to non-maintenance, and saline water reaches fertile land, which is then used for fishing purpose.
- Fishermen have received fishing net subsidies till the 2018 but are not aware of any finance schemes made available to them by the Government and have claimed not to have received any guidance on the same.

- There are also issues with the use of 'Fishfinders' by fishing trawlers which detect underwater fish. These trawlers capture vast amounts of fish per day, not leaving much catch for the small boat owners/Ramponkars.

SELF-HELP GROUPS

Licensing Issues

- The SHG's face no issues with regards to obtaining a license or registering their business at the Panchayat level. But none of the members has an FDA license. SHG members have a perception that obtaining FDA license is a lengthy process which includes many formalities and hence never initiated the process to get one.
- One of the difficulties to obtain the FDA license is that the SHGs do not have an operating office. Lack of central place to operate, conduct training programmes and sell their products forces many SHGs to run from individual members homes. They need infrastructure to take tailoring orders, catering orders and to keep the facilities availed through government schemes. There is a need for an inspection and to show a house, kitchen to acquire an FDA license. None of the members is willing to cite their residence address to obtain this license.

Limited Reach to the Market

- SHGs do not get regular and proper orders for their products, and hence employment is created by members during festive seasons. Most of their sale happens through word of mouth or the annual stalls that the panchayat sets up during Diwali (once a year). During Lok-Utsav, a '10 days' license is provided for a fee of Rs. 100 and the products prepared by Self Help Groups are not sold in the village. However, very few are aware of the business opportunities at the GCCI Asturi exhibition, Caculo Mall and Mall de Goa.
- SHG members are also unaware about whom to contact for acquiring orders to provide garments, snacks, uniforms to hospitals etc.

Lack of Opportunities

- The SHGs also face finance issues before the commencement of business. They require subsidies from the Government to start or set up their own business and do not get financial aid to package their products attractively. SHGs are unable to expand due to lack of funds and hence seek support from panchayats/government. But, instead of cooperation, the SHGs are involved in unhealthy competition.
- While providing mid-day meals, SHGs are not allocated to schools nearby. Thus, they are not able to earn much profit as the cost of transportation is high and hence not feasible. However, the panchayat does support the Self-Help Groups. Whenever there is an opportunity to conduct Government surveys, the Self Help Groups are hired.

- The groups have not explored any other options like food processing, making jams, pickles, sauces etc. They expressed interest, but they do not know how to access the same.

Lack of knowledge and proper orientation

- There is also a lack of awareness to start a small-scale business and lack of awareness about Government schemes available to SHGs. There is a difficulty in getting the schemes disbursed from public and private sector banks. SHG's are not able to avail some schemes because of technical difficulties such as specific criteria which they do not fulfil. For example "a minimum number of members in a registered SHG". So many SHG have raised funds from their savings to procure raw material.
- The SHG members said that even after getting trained in specialised areas, the women made little use of their learning. Also, the number of ladies attending the training programs were few even when they were charged a nominal fee. This is due to the lack of demand in the market, which proves to be a hurdle.
- Some women want training to be provided to women who are running SHGs to update their skills. For example, in the past, the women were taught to make bags in the panchayat. More women should be given such guidance and training.

Lack of Initiative

- There is a lack of a supportive environment at family and institutional level coupled with outdated marketing, mathematical and communication skills (aware of social media marketing but had not explicitly used it). SHGs need skill enhancement opportunities that would enable business growth and make them more skilled and competitive in the current market.
- Though SHGs have cited all the above issues which seemed to have existed for some time now, there appears to be lack of initiative or any action to alleviate them and work on some readily available options.

YOUTH

Employment challenges

- Lack of jobs and increasing unemployment is the major issue that worries youth. Decreasing availability of suitable employment is forcing youth to find employment online for more promising opportunities.

- Hotels employ cheaper labour in the form of migrants, which leads to Goans losing out on the opportunities.
- The village lacks small scale industries and factories further hindering their employment opportunities.
- Many youths don't prefer to work within the state.
- Due to a lack of lucrative jobs and prevalent corrupt system, the youth prefer to go abroad or metropolitan cities in the country. For example, young students are moving to the UK through the Portuguese passport route.

Challenges to their self-development

- Most youths continue to be unemployed as they do not want to take up any low skilled and low paying jobs.
- Youth are not keen on self-employment as it requires substantial financial commitment and support. The youth lack knowledge and training, even if such opportunities are provided to them. For example, they don't want to continue their family traditions of agriculture due to lack of interest, knowledge and the current problems faced by their parents.
- Education is more theory-based rather than skill-based. This creates a mismatch between the job and the job holder, which in turn creates stress, disinterest, and demotivation.
- Lack of foresight and entrepreneurial skills is a common problem. As mentioned earlier, the youth are not keen on starting their own ventures. They also have limited knowledge of training and facilities for such ventures. For example, limited awareness about CIBA and their services offered. One such programme is training on entrepreneurship and co-working space facilities provided.

Infrastructure Challenges

- Narrow roads and poor public transport connectivity is a travel and transport issue for students and employed youth.
- Poor internet connectivity hinders students' ability to prepare for their exams
- Lack of a well-stocked library in the village
- Placement facilities are lacking in many educational institutions leaving the youth to fend for themselves.
- Issues like mental health, substance abuse etc. not being addressed.

Lack of awareness of the Government and financial schemes

- As mentioned earlier, the majority of the youth appear to be unaware of the government schemes for self-employment and financial assistance provided by banks and other agencies.

- Youth are also unaware of Skill Development initiatives by Government, training provided under NSDC and private centres conducting skill development training courses.
- The youngsters are unaware of the various schemes offered by Govt. The EDC promotes self-employment/entrepreneurship. However, the Government should organise camps for training under CMRY.

RETAIL TRADERS

- Villagers have different types of businesses without obtaining licenses from the concerned authorities. These businesses are unregistered and hence do not have to pay taxes and fees to the authorities. Such businesses affect the legally established businesses in the area.
- Street vendors sell different products. They either have to pay very low taxes or no taxes thereby being able to sell the goods at more competitive prices.
- Roadside furniture shops have been erected with temporary structures. Despite being illegal, such shops are provided with electricity and water connections. Such businesses harm the earlier establishments which have to pay high rent and taxes. The roadside furniture shops have an unfair advantage over the established businesses on account of the above-stated issues.
- With respect to GST, most of the larger traders are aware of the tax provisions and their obligations. They file the returns themselves.
- There are various schemes provided by the Government to support the small traders. However, these traders are largely unaware of the same and therefore are unable to reap the benefits of such schemes.
- Many businesses are facing stiff competition from online marketplaces which sells the goods at very reasonable prices.
- There is also a problem of establishments undertaking multiple businesses on one business licence, thereby violating rules of operations.

SENIOR CITIZENS

- Some senior citizens are dependent on the Government. These citizens are availing the benefit of the Rs. 2000 given per month by the Government under Deendayal Scheme. However, the money is not received regularly, and arrears were sometimes paid after three months, and hence they couldn't entirely rely on the Government.
- Senior citizens have a senior citizen card to avail benefits of only the Kadamba bus service, but other establishments including grocery shops, etc. do not care to give senior citizens preference based on such cards.

- Senior citizens can avail subsidised treatment at GMC, but such a facility is available at village level medical establishments. Senior Citizens find it difficult to travel due to overcrowded buses and difficulty in climbing buses and switching buses.
- Some had availed for Health Insurance (DDSSY), but they believe that such schemes have a major drawback, i.e. the benefit is only given if the patient is admitted for eight days or more. It also has renewal issues and only designated hospitals provide services under this scheme.
- No special facilities are available for senior citizens in the village. For example, when a family member from a senior citizens family gets admitted in the hospital, the arrangement of food for the senior citizen left at home becomes a major problem.
- Senior citizens find it difficult to pay utility bills even when the facility is available online. Majority of senior citizens are not tech-savvy, and most of them do not have bank accounts. Moreover, there is a lack of internet infrastructure, which is also a major hindrance.

Recommendations for revenue generating sectors in the village

Making agriculture a wealth creating occupation.

Step 1

Understanding graveness and the ground reality

There should be a combined inspection of every village by Mamlatdar, Collector, village panchayat officials, local politicians and authorities from the Agriculture and WRD department to understand the problems faced by farmers and provide a unified solution for the same. A Directory of Farmers can be published at village level having details of farmers such as Name of the Farmer, area under cultivation, types of crops grown and so on.

Example

Saline water issue

The issue of fertile fields getting flooded by saline water needs to be resolved by demarcating the agricultural land for farming and fishing activities and ensuring proper construction of Bandh. Very often due to negligence on the maintenance or repairs of damages of bundhs, the saline water comes into fields, and this leads to the growth of mangrove plants. Hence, repairs of bundhs must be undertaken by the authority at a regular point of time. A monitoring committee comprising of members from both groups (farmers and fisherfolks) and a nominated member from the village Panchayat should ensure upkeep and maintenance of Bandh. Special budgetary provision may be created in Panchayat budget for maintenance of Bandh with resources generated from a regular levy on income of both the groups.

Protection of crops from wild animals

Destruction of crops by wild animals has wreaked havoc on farmers in the form of economic loss which has further affected the next cycle of production. It becomes crucial to reduce their burden to some extent if the government provides financial assistance to those who cannot afford the expenses.

Step 2

Educating Villagers about Farming

General awareness programmes on disposal of household waste, so there is no dumping of waste on agricultural lands. Panchayat and the state agriculture department need to promote agriculture as a wealth-creating occupation. Hands-on training is to be provided, along with, prompt supply of financial and non-financial assistance from various Government Departments, including GIPARD. Panchayat should undertake farming opportunities such as organic farming, hydroponics, vermicomposting, growing exotic vegetables, Smart irrigation systems, agri-technology and similar areas in association with Directorate of Agriculture, Agricultural Marketing Board, ICAR, Goa University and GIPARD.

Remarkable improvements in science and technology have made it imperative to adopt farming techniques which are economical and efficient. Training programs should be organised by Directorate of Agriculture/concerned authorities in the areas of crop rotation, vermicomposting, dealing with pesticides, cultivating new crops, and online marketing, Aquaponics, plastic mulching, soil solarisation, controlled environment cultivation is some of the economic and efficient techniques of cultivation. To enable future generations to carry on with farming activities. The Directorate of Agriculture/concerned authorities should organise field trips for farmers so that techniques from one area/region can be taken to other area/region to learn cultivation practices.

Example

Kerala Model of farming/Contract farming

In Kerala some companies take up farming on a contract basis, that is from sowing seed to harvesting the crop or involve in any other work that is required by the farmer. Hence increased agricultural activities can pave the way for the revival of the village economy.

Hydroponics

The limited agricultural land in the village can be augmented with the technique of hydroponics. Farmers should be encouraged to produce exotic vegetables through hydroponics as demand for such product is increasing, and they are high-value items with the potential of boosting farm income exponentially. State agricultural directorate in association with the Panchayat can provide training in hydroponics to the village farmers. A subsidy scheme may be initiated at the state government level for promoting modern farming techniques and setting up of hydroponic units.

Vermicompost

creating a separate facility within the village area (preferably field-based facility), that can also source required waste from village households. Panchayat can aid in the collection of household wet waste required for vermicomposting. Youth may be encouraged to set up the composting unit as a commercial entity ensures sustainability. Similar start-ups already exist in other states in India. Vermicomposting can also be a partial solution to solid waste management in the village besides proving to be the best alternative to chemical fertilisers. Such organic fertilisers can be made available to farmers at one-fourth of the price of chemical fertilisers.

Step 3

Various Government Initiatives

Consolidation of landholdings and community farming

Consolidation of landholdings has become the need of the hour. Government has to provide some incentives to consolidate the fragmented land holdings to increase the economies of scale. Hence, benefit accruing from the consolidation of landholdings will not be limited to an only single individual, but the entire village economy will be benefited from the large-scale production of food grains and commercial crops. Government formulation of a suitable system of land-use agreements so that landowners can lease out their lands for cultivation without the fear of their land being taken over by the tenants (as was the case with the Mundkar law). The government should initiate mutation/transfer of property (area under cultivation), i.e. Form I and XIV in the names of legal heirs' presently carrying out farming, to enable farmers avail government schemes easily.

Co-operative and Community farming should be encouraged, by classifying Communitade lands, Confrari or church lands, temple lands and private lands. Community farming can be introduced by joining many farmers together so that they can accumulate the benefit of economies of scale with less cost and high production. Multiple crops can be cultivated throughout the year by adopting, farming strategies such as organic, commercial, seasonal, cash crops or for plantation of coconut or fruit-bearing trees on these fallow lands instead of the current practice of cultivation of the only paddy during monsoon season.

Building Infrastructure for Storage

Appropriate warehousing facility comprising of cold storage is needed in the village for storage or procurement of the product before transporting to various markets. Since agriculture produce is perishable items of consumption.

Platform to sell

The marketing activities in the village are inefficient. Also, farm products sold near the highway and other scattered locations. Farmer community itself is mostly unorganized. The village Panchayat can encourage farmers to organize themselves into farmer's cooperative that can help in ensuring the marketing of farm produce and give voice to farmers. A dedicated marketplace is a must in the village to ensure that villagers buy their requirements of agricultural produce from the village market itself. To promote village-level tourism, concepts like, "do it yourself", "Pluck your like own vegetables", "Leasing out a plant/tree to a family in urban areas", can be implemented to boost local tourism and also increase the interest in agriculture.

Modernisation

Increased mechanisation and modernisation of agriculture and allied activities will increase the likelihood of the youth taking up agriculture. The village panchayat with assistance from the Agriculture Technology Management Agency (ATMA) Goa, can promote sustainable agriculture, as the rewards and incentives available will benefit farmers and village. The labour shortage issue can be dealt via mechanisation of agriculture activities as machines can be utilised in the areas of transplanting, harvesting and irrigation. The government should help in mechanised farming at a subsidised rate. Also, the government can finance micro-enterprises and start-ups to encourage youth in making farm equipment's available to Goan farmers.

Example

FaaS model

The agricultural machines are generally required only for a specific duration, and, these are high-value machines are unaffordable to an individual farmer. So, farming as a Service (FaaS) model can be implemented. FaaS is a pay-per-use model that supply farming machines and has the potential of reducing labour cost by 50%.

Animal Husbandry

Villagers may be encouraged to take up rearing of animals in the form of poultry farming, dairy farming, piggery, rearing of goats, as an economic activity. The attractive subsidies made available by the department of animal husbandry and veterinary services for various types of animal husbandry, such as Kamdhenu scheme, modern dairy scheme, poultry scheme, piggery scheme, subsidy for cultivating fodder and incentives to dairy farmers for pouring milk into dairy societies.

The village panchayat may take the assistance of the department of animal husbandry and veterinary services to provide training for unemployed youth and farmers in the field of dairy farming, piggery farming and poultry, to make the village self-sufficient in milk meat and eggs.

Booths may be set up with the assistance of the government, to enable the locals to avail of fresh poultry, dairy and other animal farm products, thus ensuring that organic and unadulterated products are available to the community.

Stray dogs are considered a menace and are being tortured by locals. Stray dogs can be sterilised or impounded in shelters, and domestic adoption may be encouraged. Domesticated dogs may be trained for guarding the farms/plantation against rodents and reptiles.

Apiculture (beekeeping), an opportunity appropriate for rural areas may be taken up as an income generation avenue in the homes of the locals. Locally sourced honey has massive potential for its medicinal benefits, and beeswax is also widely used in carpentry, candles and cosmetics. Small scale beekeeping which can be done through boxes in one's homes can bring in revenue for villagers. Apiculture has been a success in Uttara Kannada district (Karnataka), and the employment potential is very high. Collaboration with ATMA may be sought in this regard.

Fishing

Awareness campaigns need to be held to create awareness on the government schemes available through the State Fisheries department for mussel and oyster farming, as well as the income generation opportunities in the fish farming business.

Coastal villages can increase self-employment opportunities for the youth as the coastal belt is ideal for fish breeding/farming. Villagers may be trained through the fishermen training centre of the Directorate of Fisheries in the State. Pisciculture or fish farming can be taken up an occupation by the villagers from the fishing business or by the experienced ramponkars with the help of youth from the village.

Example

Cage fish farming

Udupi's successful 'Cage fish farming' empowers locals to begin fish culture through the installation of cages in their yards, which enable fish farming for self-consumption as well.

Horticulture

Coconut tree plantations should be encouraged through incentives for plantation and maintenance through the Coconut Development Board. The village can also benefit from the revival of its oil mill that will result in a huge source of revenue through the optimum use of coconuts.

Coconut cultivators can particularly benefit from the production of virgin coconut oil through the Rashtriya Kisan Vikas Yojana (RKVY), with assistance from the Indian Council of Agricultural Research (ICAR), Goa.

Food processing at the various levels of small-scale operations in homes can be encouraged if the cultivation of the traditionally grown village fruits and vegetables are revived in designated land areas in place of the hillsides that gave way to development projects.

New high-yield variety cashew plant saplings should be distributed to replace the old infected ones under the 'Cashew Plantation Rejuvenation Scheme' promoted under the National Horticulture Mission implemented by the Horticulture department. This will increase production of cashew in plantations and will fetch good returns for the orchard/cashew plantation owners.

Certified organic farming may be promoted through 'Paramparagat Krishi Vikas Yojana' (PKVY), a component of Soil Health Management (SHM) of the major project National Mission of Sustainable Agriculture (NMSA).

Self-Help Group Recommendations

Step 1

Awareness/ Encouragement to women

Role of Panchayats

Village women should be encouraged to seek gainful employment through the formation of SHGs and use their skills in various areas for the benefit of the villagers as well as for economic independence. SHGs can be encouraged for traditional activities, especially where locals possess knowledge and skills acquired from previous generations. Gram panchayat can play an important role in enhancing the quality of the SHG's, by enhancing awareness and networking of these groups. Awareness training will help SHGs to avail benefits of different government schemes. Panchayat should create awareness about trade and government bodies like the Goa Chamber of Commerce and Industry and, The Women and Child department who are involved in supporting the initiatives of SHG's at various levels.

Example

Kudumbashree

Integrated approach on the lines of Kudumbashree in Kerala can be thought of as a good structure for developing SHGs and their economic activities in Goa. SHGs from a particular ward can form a monitoring committee at Ward level. This ward level body can provide information about government schemes and other benefits to all the SHGs. Ward level bodies can elect village level committee to facilitate further assistance and growth through the arrangement of finance, logistics, and marketing capabilities to all the SHGs in association with the village panchayat. This structure can also be exploited to address issues related to health, education, nutrition, domestic violence or any other women related issues. It is however required that the entire setup is provided excellent support by state-level authorities

Other awareness sources

There are numerous avenues available to the SHG's like the GCCI-Facilitation centre, which is a free helpdesk available for women. This centre can help women on issues related to their venture, conducts workshops related to FDA and packaging, and directs women to government bodies like the Government Mahalaxmi Trust for various free courses in cooking, baking, and flower making.

Ms Pallavi Salgaonkar, Chairperson of GCCI Women's Wing, highlighted that the Goa Chamber has also signed an MOU with Spark Technologies a private entity which launched an app called 'digital baila', which provides free service of listing products and offering online marketing of the products of these women entrepreneurs. Besides this, the chamber organises 'Asturi' an annual exhibition and sale of products made by these groups across the state.

Vibrant Goa too held a workshop on 'how to market your products' which was a big hit amongst the self-help groups.

FDA / FSSAI Licence simplification

The FDA has a very basic process of registration, and it is well listed out and easy to follow. Additionally, the licence fees have been reduced, and the process of filing for FSSAI licence has been further simplified with the new upgraded and user-friendly Food safety Compliance System (FoSCoS) from 1st June 2020. Ms Jyoti Sardesai, Director of Food and Drugs Administration, mentioned that her department is willing to brief the Self-Help Groups to facilitate the licensing process.

Step 2

Capability Enhancement

Government Support

The Director of Women and Child Department, Ms Deepali Naik, gave insight into the various initiatives for capability enhancement of Self-Help Groups. The department provides a group stipend to the Self-Help Groups under the Swawlambhan scheme of up to Rs. 20000/- per year. The department has also funds earmarked for various skill enhancement activities of these SHG's. Each group is allowed to opt for one course per year which they may choose from over 20 options including beautician, baking, cooking, khadi handicrafts, Goa, village artisans and computer applications. Each course is about three months, after which they receive a certificate, and these courses are free of cost and conducted by eminent resource persons, sponsored by the department.

Panchayat Support

Panchayats can provide training sessions on the packaging of food items to make it more attractive and various courses like food preservation course, preparation of juices, jams, pickles and phenyl.

Example

Workshops and training

SHG's require training in Catering food, to learn new dishes from other regions of India and to cook healthy and organic meals. Workshops and training will help SHG's cater to ore extensive customer base. Properly organised Online training and workshops would be feasible in terms of cost and other resources. Also, training of various handicrafts such as candle making, tailoring, bag making, and soft toys could help them diversify business activities.

Premises for business

The village panchayat can provide separate premises in the village for carrying out SHG activities, which would help in streamlining business activities, attracting customers at a common point of sale, safekeeping of products.

Step 3

Marketing Support

Government support

The government should take initiatives to train SHGs to market their products online. A step ahead, the government can also help them in funding for necessary equipment, network and common affordable website. The government can come up with a common website or e-commerce portal, allowing SHGs or small business vendors to market and sell their products.

Women and Child Department

The Women and Child Department provide support even in terms of various marketing initiatives to the SHG's. They have helped SHG's by connecting bakers to display products by providing display showcases at various Bakeries. The ladies are required only to pay the GST amount to the store owners for display and sale of their products. All Government meetings of the department have snacks and tea supplied by various SHG's. The department can connect the SHG's with education institutions for supplying food.

Example

Citizen livelihood centre

The department has set up a Citizen livelihood centre in Vasco at the Red Cross society premises which were largely unused. They provide display and sale space to these ladies on prior booking for a maximum of 8 days each. They are required to book the space and pay a nominal fee of Rs 100/- for this service. This centre also maintains a database of service providers like plumbers, Mahila purohits, Padekars and connects them to customers. They are required to share than 2% of their profits to meet administrative costs. The department is willing to extend such similar support to other groups.

Mid-day meal contracts

Mid-day meal contracts from schools should be given to the SHGs operating in the village. As it works when schools are within a reasonable distance or else, the high transportation cost would negate the profitability.

Tiffin and Home delivery services

Government offices could be potential customers. Initial marketing aid could be provided to connect them to corporate orders.

Allotment of stalls at Lok Utsav

SHGs and small village vendors from Goa should also be given priority to put stalls at the fests like Lok Utsav. There should be a transparent procedure for allotment of the stalls.

Stalls at Kadamba Bus-stand

The Self-Help groups expressed a need to help them reach out to markets for their products.

Building Networks

The Women and Child Department have connected the SHG's to the industrial estate whereby the women are involved in spare part making, sanitary napkins, straws, screws and bottle cap making. The machinery and training have been provided to them by the concerned production unit, and the machinery has been installed in their houses. They, in turn, are supplying these products to the units in the industrial estate. A similar, initiative can be taken up by SHG's from other Panchayat as The Women and Child Department are ready to extend all support for the same.

Generate innovative business ideas.

The women and Child department tied up with the 'Bandekar Group' to train women in converting organic waste from flowers used for religious purposes in temples to agarbattis and fodder.

The One Village One Product (OVOP) strategy adopted in countries like Japan should be implemented in Goan villages, each village can identify a product and couple with the geographical indication (GI), to create market positioning for such a product. Digital marketing and business networks can be used for such products for brand building and sales. In India, the state of Uttar Pradesh has already implemented a similar concept of One District One Product (ODOP).

Youths

Step 1

Create General Awareness

Role of Panchayat

Create awareness among youth on the functioning of the Panchayat, Gram Sabha and other social issues. A local level art and culture committee should be active, and it can take up activities for the youth. Conduct awareness programmes on AIDS and drug de-addiction. Organisations like Church, Caritas and NGOs can be engaged to help address personal problems like depression and anxiety.

Awareness about Employment Opportunities

Role of Government

The government should bridge the gap between the vacancies and unemployment by building some link with industries. Collect data on unemployment as well as a place where information on employment opportunities are available.

Government with the help of Economic Development Corporation, private organisations and other related agencies should conduct awareness camp of existing schemes, and every new scheme should be widely promoted by using different channels, mostly social media which has an extensive and fast reach. Schedule of such programmes should be shared with village panchayats.

Role of Panchayat

Panchayat should organise awareness camps for DDU-GKY, CMRY and other schemes. Also, Panchayat should organise career guidance talks, and awareness programs to direct youth find employment out of limited options and spread awareness among youth about Government schemes and financial assistance.

Panchayat should encourage village youth to enrol themselves on government apprenticeship portal (<https://apprenticeshipindia.org/>) so that village youth can get hands-on experience in various jobs which can improve their employability. Panchayat should inform nearby Industrial units in from Industrial estate to notify vacancies to the village so that village youth if eligible can apply for such positions.

Step 2

Skill Development

Role of Panchayat

Panchayat can help the youth in acquiring skill training in areas such as digitalisation, personality development, accounting, and bookkeeping by conducting workshops/programmes in association with other agencies.

Panchayat can coordinate with ICAR Old Goa for providing training in agriculture, conduct vocational/skill development workshops, especially in IT since this seems to be a viable sector at this time which also offers better pay and can coordinate with culinary institutes for arranging a bakery course for interested village youth. Also, panchayat can help create industry linkages with educational institutions, as there is by and large a mismatch between demand and supply of skills and expertise required by the industry and the students who graduate.

Role of Government

Village youth are optimistic about undergoing skill development training for seeking employment. The government should equip villages by providing a skill development centre. The centre can provide training in the areas of Information Technology, Food Processing, Personality Development, Accounting, Agriculture, new farming technology like Aquaponics/Hydroponics. There is no need to construct separate structure as these centres can be accommodated by any educational institution within the village and can be functional during the non-instructional hours of the said institution.

A state-level Government and CSR-funded agency may be established in order to facilitate the provision of vocational and skills training programmes. GCCCI and technical institutions may be directly involved in such a system. Existing PPP structure under Skill India missions (NSDC) may be exploited. District level PPP agency may be established under the supervision of the state government in order to make it profitable for the agency to sustain over a long period and get a sufficient number of trainees from various villages. Technical institutions, ITI and private training partners may be integrated into this district level agency to provide a more extensive choice of courses and increase the availability of faculty resources. PMKVY programmes must reach the village level through such PPP platforms. For non-technical courses such as accountancy, office administration, marketing, soft skills and others, the educational institutions closer to the village can offer such courses through Panchayat. Schedule of such courses should be publicised for the benefit of the village youth. Directorate of Technical Education can facilitate technical skill programmes in areas of computers (hardware, software and graphics), electrical and mechanical. in association with Government Polytechnic, and ITI, institutions. Directorate of Handicrafts, Textile and Coir, need to give wide publicity of its courses in handicrafts as awareness level of government initiatives is less at the village level. Such short courses can provide orientation to rural youth about facilities and institutions available with the state government and can be conducted in association with educational institutions.

Example

Skill development in the areas of community farming, mechanised farming, contract farming, Aquaponics, Water harvesting will also encourage the youth to start something on their own and generate employment.

Step 3

Entrepreneurship

One of the effective measures to tackle the unemployment problem is entrepreneurship. Entrepreneurs not only generate employment for themselves but also others. Finance appears to be a significant hurdle in the path of entrepreneurship. The government offers several schemes to promote self-employment. The Banks and other financial institutions offer several financial services to suit the needs of aspiring entrepreneurs. An extensive awareness has to be created in respect of these facilities. An annual session informing about such facilities and procedure to avail the same may be arranged.

Government support

The central government and the state governments have come up with different schemes with the primary agenda of promoting entrepreneurship by proving finance and necessary support in all the required areas.

Panchayat support

Panchayat can act as a coordinating platform for agencies like CIBA, FiiRE, and GCCI and establish rural linkage for promoting entrepreneurship in villages. Regular entrepreneurial motivation programmes should be held in the village through Panchayat to encourage youth to take up entrepreneurship as an occupation, and this can be done by inviting resource persons from CIBA, FiiRE, GEMS and young entrepreneurs.

Example

Traditional occupations can be revived to promote self-employment and self-sustenance. Individual interactive sessions or field visits to demonstrate new trends in the areas of Agriculture, Farming, and fishing could be arranged to educate & motivate the youth to undertake these occupations which have been a source of livelihood for the earlier generations more feasibly and effectively.

Retail traders

Awareness program

Role of Panchayat

Awareness Programs

Conduct an awareness programme on the schemes of the government to educate traders, so that traders can make use of these schemes in acquiring the additional finances at lower interest rates, expansion of business and better management.

Inspection of Establishments

The licensing of establishments should be streamlined to create an equal playing field between for legally established entities and other informal establishments. Panchayat should conduct a regular inspection in the village to identify such illegal and informal establishments and ensure that they do not undertake commercial activities without necessary permissions and payment of taxes. Ward members may be assigned the task of reporting such entities and ensuring compliances from them. Inspections can help panchayats in augmenting revenues.

Role of Government

GST information

More clarity and complete information on the new GST reform should be communicated to the traders through registered phone number, email address or mass media.

Establishing district-level nodal agency

A district-level nodal agency may be established to ensure a steady supply of materials to traders in times of crisis as in the absence of such authority, traders are entirely helpless and suffer heavy losses in business. This nodal agency can register complaints and coordinate with other state machinery for approvals and permits, for ensuring supplies of freight of all types of goods.

State-wide retail policy

There is an urgent need to implement state-wide retail policy, so that standard rules govern retailers of all types. The retail policy can also resolve issues of illegal establishments, provide for nodal agency to address grievances and share information on registrations and government approval procedures.

Senior Citizens

Health Services

Health is a priority issue for senior citizens, and the provision of health facility in the village itself is also essential to avoid hardship to senior citizens. There should be a prompt treatment facility on a priority basis for senior citizens in hospitals. Hospitals and PHC located in the village should provide medical health check facility to senior citizens in the village. Hospitals and PHC can employ counsellors for helping senior citizens with mental health. Regular checks for complete blood count, diabetes and blood pressure should be ensured at these locations on first preference basis. Hospitals and PHC should ensure the provision of regular medicines to senior citizens irrespective of whether they hold health card or not so that they are not compelled to travel to distant locations for supplies of medicines.

Training in online services

Concerned entities should ensure regular billing of utility services as accumulated billing creates hardships for senior citizens in terms of payments. Training in online services may be provided to senior citizens for making payment of utility bills, placing orders for medicines and other essential supplies.

Facilities for senior citizens.

Panchayat can network with agencies specializing in elderly care such as Sevarat and Divine Foundation, so that service of such agencies is made available to senior citizens in the village. Quarterly health check-up camps can be organized for senior citizens in association with such agencies in the village itself.

Panchayat, in association with the Village Development Committee, can create a recreation facility in the village for senior citizens to fulfil their social and health needs. Such a facility may be created through mandatory CSR contribution from industrial units located in the village and crowdfunding

Scope for enhancing Panchayat revenue

Online tax collection and digitization of records

Goan panchayats are lagging in the digitization of records, so financial statements can be prepared using excel or Government Accounting software. Also, all tax collections should be online. The panchayat can have a tie-up with the bank and collect taxes.

House tax is the primary source of income to the panchayat. However, analysis of panchayats financial statements reveals a decline in the amount of house tax collected, as people forget to pay house tax and residents working abroad, are unable to make payments on time.

For a timely collection of house tax, there is a need to design a user-friendly and straightforward mechanism which allows for online payments of house tax. Regular reminders to residents, penalties and other deterrents may be adopted to ensure timely payments. Additionally, an annual list of defaulters may be displayed.

Other taxes which are revenue generators to the panchayat include light tax, hoarding tax and professional tax. Taxpayers should be educated about the importance of paying taxes on time to enable the use of the same for maintenance and upkeep of local civic amenities. The village panchayat may be allowed to exercise full freedom in the enforcement of tax payments, without interference from higher government authorities.

The market for local products

Fishing and farming are the major inherent occupations carried out by the villagers. Villagers face problems in selling their products due to non-availability of suitable market areas. Vendors are forced to sell products roadside, or along highways, posing a danger to themselves and the motorists. A suitable shed arrangement may be made for a local farmers market by charging a reasonable fee.

Promoting water and heritage tourism

The income of Goan villages can increase if the local body promotes quality tourism, with a unique selling point (USP). Goan beaches are visited by locals and tourists' picnics and evening walks. In order to tap the domestic and international tourists, there is ample scope for the panchayat to encourage locals to undertake water sports on a fairly reasonable scale without disturbing nature. Water tourism, would, in turn, generate revenue for the panchayat. Other water bodies in the village such as the river and creek may also be considered for development as tourism spots. Also, there should be zoning on beaches to ensure sustainable development.

Efforts may be carried out to preserve and promote these unique heritage/cultural sites at local, national and international level through collaboration with the Archaeological Survey of India (ASI) and Goa Tourism Development Corporation (GTDC). Efforts made in this direction are expected to attract tourists towards rural tourism, thereby generating revenue for the panchayat through entry fees, license fees from appointed vendors.

Management of expenditure

Grants

Octroi grants and industrial estate related grants to be resumed for the benefit of the village panchayat so that it can undertake more developmental projects in the village. Garbage collection grant should be brought back to its original level since it impacts one of the core functions of village panchayat of maintaining sanitation. Garbage tax should be strictly collected from households rendering their rooms/households on rent and households should be encouraged to take up Organic compost, would reduce expenses on disposal of wet garbage.

Public Work

Management of public works expenditure is recommended by examining possibilities of reducing annual expenditure on road maintenance without compromising on the quality of roads constructed. A minimum guarantee period for roads should be ensured from contractors so that annual expenditure on maintenance can be curtailed. Necessary groundwork may be initiated with technical expertise available within government machinery to identify standard road construction technology/methods that can build lasting village roads and avoid substantial annual expenditure.

Electrical Work

Possibilities of savings need to be examined concerning annual spending on electrical goods. Again, quality goods need to be acquired to avoid recurring damage to electrical items. If the damage is on account of falling trees in the rainy season, then regular cutting of tree branches well before the rainy season need to be undertaken. If electrical fittings get spoiled every year in such large quantities, then the supplier/company needs to be changed to save public money. Installation of Solar panels would help to reduce such costs in the long run.

Limitations

Panchayat ward members did not have all the information required to fill the questionnaires correctly. Panchayat secretary was also not able to provide necessary information as panchayat office do not have enough data. Also, data from various government departments such as Agriculture and revenue mismatch. In social science, data can never be accurate as it bound to differ due to human responses. People involved in focus group discussions were hesitant to discuss the broad issues.

Conclusion

Goan villages have a vast amount of agricultural land and interested youths to pursue agriculture and related activities as there is plenty of potential in farming, fishing and animal husbandry. The growing demand in these areas can help yield profit in the future. Also, rich biodiversity and scenic beauty of the village can be redeveloped as tourist spots to promote tourism in that village.

The opportunity for the village is also immense. Such as scope of innovations in agriculture like contract and community farming, aquaponics, start-up of food processing industries. Scope for promotion of more SHG, self-employment and start-ups by providing proper training and skill development programmes and scope for tourism development by beautification of the village by way of retrofitting.

GIPARD should be monitoring authority and implement a pilot project based on the previously proposed village specific individual plans. However, neither the government nor the village panchayat has a specific vision for Goan Villages. Panchayats do not have a proper system for recording and maintaining data. Further studies are required wherein the possibility of applying of DOUGHNUT economic model, or any other village specific economic model can be analysed.
